Ryan Nicholson biography

Ryan Nicholson loves horror movies, plain and simple. Ryan started out in the film world as an award-winning make-up effects artist but writing and directing were always in his sights. After making the internet drip blood with his first short film Torched, Ryan focused on writing and directing his first feature length movie Live Feed. It wasn't long after Live Feed had hit video stores across North America when Ryan was already gearing up for his next feature, the horror/comedy/gore-fest entitled Gutterballs. With a 2009 release approaching for Gutterballs, Ryan's already writing and developing new projects. "I make movies that I want to see", Ryan says, "I can't wait around for someone else to make them." When asked about the ultra-violent content and excessive gore in his movies, Ryan had this to say, "I make more is more horror. I'm not of the school of thought that showing something off-screen is more effective than showing it on-screen. I like to show everything. I leave nothing to the imagination." Looking at Ryan's work, he is a man of his words!
